Raipur: Six students of Indian Institute of Management Raipur (IIM-R) represented India in the annual India-China youth exchange programme.

A team consisting of 200 members of India youth delegation visited China as part of efforts by the two governments to provide opportunities to their youth to mutually understand each other and strengthen people-to-people exchanges between the two countries.

The students, who are currently pursuing their management courses, took the chance as a major experience in their life.

Accordingly, Bansari

IIM-Raipur students were part of 200-member Indian team

Bhanushali, Chaitanya Dwivedi, Dhanashree Nemade, Manali Chakrabarty, Navya Umashankar and Vinay Jain participated in this programme.

They interacted with the volunteers of All China

Youth Federation as well as top-level management personnel of leading businesses firms.

The delegation gave the students an opportunity to experience various facets of China's economy, society and culture through company visits, tours and lectures.

They also provided a first-hand knowledge about China with the help of close interaction with experts and practitioners from various fields including industry, education, sports, science and technology, urban planning, agriculture and health.

Over the years, India and China have set up several dialogue mechanisms covering political, economic, consular as well as regional and international issues. But misconceptions and preconceived notions are common between the two nations due to fewer personal exchanges.
